

The National Capital Chapter of the AHMP

The National Capital Chapter is based in the Washington, D.C. area, with membership stretching from Harford County, MD, to Baltimore, through suburban Maryland, to D.C., Northern Virginia and south to Fredericksburg.

Chapter meetings typically include a speaker presenting a topic pertinent to the professional interests of the membership. Speakers include regulators, environmental and safety professionals, and chapter members.

Environmental, health, and safety professionals involved in hazardous material management will find meetings interesting and informative, and a great way to meet other professionals in their industry. Guests are always welcome at our meetings!

If you would like to attend a meeting or join the National Capital Chapter, complete the form provided on the reverse side and mail it to the contact listed. Detailed information about upcoming meetings and the Chapter are available on the world wide web at:

What is the Alliance of Hazardous Materials Professionals?

The AHMP is the membership organization for individuals who have successfully completed the education, experience, and testing requirements necessary to become a Certified Hazardous Materials Manager (CHMM).

The Alliance of Hazardous Materials Professionals (AHMP) cultivates professional development through peer group interaction, continuing education, and the exchange of ideas and information relating to hazardous materials management. AHMP comprises more than 65 Chapters with over 6000 members.

The Alliance fosters expertise in: Environmental Health and Safety Regulatory Compliance and Policy Science and Technology Materials Handling Emergency Response Remediation

In conjunction with local chapters, AHMP presents an annual conference that encourages free and open dissemination of technical information that spans the hazardous materials management profession. Conference highlights include educational sessions and a full-scale emergency response exercise. The conference provides individual members with the opportunity to discuss issues with AHMP Board Members to help chart the future of the organization, and allows for the presentation of technical studies and papers to enhance the profession of hazardous materials management.

The Value of AHMP Membership

The Institute of Hazardous Materials Management (IHMM) created the CHMM credential and administers the CHMM program. The credential represents only the beginning of a career long journey for the hazardous materials professional. Membership in the Alliance creates professional status and nurtures a source of livelihood. AHMP creates growth and value for the certification program through:

- Quality education programs and activities
- Technical information resources
- Developing ethical standards for the profession
- Helping define industry standards
- Interacting with other technical organizations
- Encouraging public and private agencies to include the CHMM credential in their contract requirements
- Career planning and employment networking
- Presentation of an annual technical conference
- Awareness of new developments affecting hazardous materials managers
- Publications and Quarterly Newsletter
- Internet page with links to chapter web pages, environmental, government, and state agencies
